PERUVIAN SCANDAL LEFT TO AMERICA; BRITAIN IS SLOW

Foreign Office Says U. S. Has Best Chance of Getting Something Done

LONDON, Eng., July 19.—The atrocities committed in the Putumayo rubber district in Peru, which universally have been characterized here as surpassing in horror any charged to the rubber collectors of the Congo, apparently will be kept in the limelight until something is done to punish the perpetrators and to bring about the assurance that there will be no repetition.

Questions were launched at the British Foreign Office in the House of Commons today, and from the replies it was apparent that the Foreign Office expects to take a subordinate place to the State Department at Washington in bringing Peru to book.

"It is clear, I think," said Francis D. Acland, Parliamentary Secretary for Foreign Affairs, "that the United States has a better opportunity of getting things done than any other Government interested."

Acland also referred to the question raised by the United States Government as to whether Peru is a suitable State to have control of a district like the Putumayo, or whether that Government should not be forcibly dispossessed of it; and he promised that "his majesty's Government will do everything it possibly can to help any action the United States may take."

One of the objects, the under secretary added, of the British Foreign Office in publishing the blue book on the subject was to influence public opinion in the United States, and he thought it would no doubt produce that effect. On being asked what steps the Government intended to take against the directors of the rubber company, the speaker answered, "This is a horrible company."

Acland said the company was now in liquidation, but that the Government would be delighted if any of its directors could be made amenable to English law. The Government intended to investigate how far they were liable and to bring them to justice if possible. The speaker added that none of the perpetrators of the outrages was an Englishman.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Correspondence between the State Department and the British Government looking to the suppression of atrocities practiced upon natives in the Putumayo rubber country indicate that the two governments are in perfect accord.

Stuart J. Fuller, this Government's special agent, recently announced his arrival at Iquitos, the head of deep-water navigation on the Amazon, and his purpose to establish a base there and proceed up the river to the Putumayo valley. He is not expected to make an original investigation, for the State Department has accepted the British report as quite sufficient.

The Peruvian Government having undertaken to bring to justice the guilty ones, Mr. Fuller is charged to see to it that this promise is redeemed and that the conditions complained of are ended. It is assumed by the State Department that the causes of complaint have already been removed.

Because of the difficulty of access to the Putumayo country, however, it will be some time before the State Department can get a report from Mr. Fuller.

MAINLAND CROPS VERY PROMISING

Henry Clews, in his special letter of July 20, gives the following cheerful estimate of the business situation:

"The prime factor in our business situation at the moment is the splendid crop outlook. Wheat has been doing particularly well. The result has been a decline of about 17 cents per bushel during the past month, and the outlook is for a yield of about 700,000,000 bushels, compared with 621,000,000 last year, provided no injury occurs during the next ten days.

The only crops of importance concerning which there is any uncertainty are corn and cotton. Both are late, but have recovered much of the lost ground. Their present outlook is for a very large yield, but both crops have a number of weeks to run before maturity. August is usually a month of deterioration for both of these crops, whose chief danger is early frost. Fortunately, there is ample margin in present conditions to secure a full average yield if nothing more than ordinary deterioration occurs. The outlook agriculturally, therefore, is eminently satisfactory; and once more the farmers who must still be considered the backbone of the country are assured a profitable harvest.

"Prices are still high for nearly all agricultural products, but that must be chiefly attributed to relative scarcity. The United States is much in need of better results from the farm. The last census shows that while our population increased 20 per cent. in the decade the acreage under cultivation increased about 2 per cent. This, it need hardly be said, has not a little to do with the high cost of living. Our farmers should get busy and increase their product by more scientific methods, if not by larger acreage. Living on the farm is in many respects much more attractive than formerly, and it is high time that the tide should turn back to the farm, if only to prevent the unwholesome congestion of population in our large cities which seriously augments social discomfort and unrest.

"Another direction in which improvement is noticeable is in the iron trade. The railroads have again been buying materials and equipment with greater freedom and in spite of advancing prices. It is many months since the steel trade has been in as satisfactory condition as today. Production is running on a record-breaking scale. General business cannot be expected to persistently ignore such encouraging conditions in agriculture and in the great basic steel industry. From all parts of the interior come reports of increasing confidence on the part of businessmen, bankers and those at the head of industrial affairs. Preparations are now being made for a good fall and winter trade. Politics are much less disturbing and there is an inclination to sidetrack such issues as far as possible. West of the Alleghenies the drift of sentiment is decidedly toward optimism, and this feeling is slowly but surely making itself felt throughout the entire Atlantic seaboard.

"The monetary outlook has improved. A better demand for funds is anticipated in the early future owing to crop requirements and the increasing activity of business. Our banks have been strengthening their position by calling in of loans, which evidently had much to do with last week's liquidation in stocks."

THE VANISHING SIDE WHISKERS

To one of a philosophic turn of mind it is of mournful interest to note the decline and fall of that once flourishing American institution, the side whisker. Whiskers have fallen into disrepute. They are the emblem of anarchy, or, paradoxically, of standstill, and they have become a byword and a hissing.

And yet, once upon a time our most honored and respectful citizens indulged in this form of personal disfigurement. Most of the Generals of the Civil War wore whiskers, and if you turn to any family album compiled in the early seventies you will find many fine specimens adorning the cheeks and chins of otherwise unimpeachable persons. There were other evidences, too, of a tendency of concealment which existed at the time the side whisker was in its prime. Those were the days when gingerbread houses were in vogue and concealed plumbing.

But that does not serve to explain the decline of the whisker. If it was beautiful, forty years ago, why is it not beautiful now? One cannot say for sure. It may be that the nation-wide crusade for better sanitation, open plumbing and so on sounded the death knell of the whisker. Scientists tell us that luxuriant whiskers formed an ideal hiding place for germs. In the dark forest aisles of a thriving pair of Burnside's full many a microbe grew to manhood, waiting only the touch of a breeze to go forth and slay. Doctors could carry them from house to house; but doctors are foolish folks, who are forever trying to find a way to cut down their own business by driving out disease, and so it happens that most of them have discarded whiskers.

Then, too, whiskers had no material value, unless you chanced to be the owner of a mattress factory. They did not conduce to the comfort or profit of the wearer. In hot weather they were uncomfortable and in the winter they were too often filled with iceicles. Kipling once wrote of a girl, who was in a position to know, who insisted that a kiss from a man without a mustache was like an egg with-out-salt. That doubtless was a personal preference, but even so, no such argument has ever been urged in favor of the side whisker.

Whiskers today may be an indication of character, and then, they may be purely accidental. As the wind bloweth where it listeth, so with its favored playmate, the whisker.—Kansas City Star.

"BLESSING TO WOMEN"

is what an grateful woman call Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This is because after suffering for six long, weary years with a weakness so prevalent among her sex, she was restored to perfect health by this famous medicine for woman's ills. This has been the experience of thousands of grateful women who have depended upon this tried and true remedy.

DR. WALTERS ON WILHELMINA.

Among the passengers to Honolulu on the S. S. Wilhelmina on Tuesday will be Dr. St. D. G. Walters, who has been spending the last three months in California. He will resume his practise at once and give Dr. Herbert an opportunity to take a well-deserved rest. The latter intends to leave on the S. S. Makura on August 13 for Vancouver, B. C., and motor thence along the Pacific Coast to San Francisco. He expects to be absent about a month.
